'T WAS A CLOSE SHAVE

Looked For Moment As Though Wallace's Boat Was To Be Rammed

Capt. Lou Wallace and his crew of Georges scallop fishermen had a narrow escape last year when their boat, the Virginia R., was rammed and sunk by beam trawler and for a moment was threatened with a similar experience in a pea soup fog last week.

Laying to for the night after a hard day's fishing the Louis Thebaud, Captain Wallace's splendid big dragger was riding easily, with the crew sleeping below. The lookout heard the low moan of a liner's whistle to the eastward. It drew nearer and nearer. As the ship approached Capt. Wallace was awakened and ordered the boat underway and the men aroused. Suddenly from out of the murk appeared the huge bow of the ship bearing directly down on the dragger.

The dragger did not have time to start and the men prepared to jump overboard when the liner passed by so close that the fishermen could almost touch her.

Off into the fog she disappeared, a mass of lights and power, and the crew of the Thebaud stretched their arms and went below wondering what next would be the call to disturb their much needed rest.

THE HALL FAMILY

Hall Reunion in Newcastle, Reviving a Custom Dropped About Seven Years Ago

Descendants of Artell A. Hall, with their husbands and wives, held a reunion Saturday at the home of James F. Hall, in New Castle. Dinner was served in a grove adjoining the old homestead, after which the following program was presented by great-grandchildren: Violin solo, Clara Jane Dick; piano duet, Claude and John Gilpatrick; rededication, Alice Eleanor Hall; vocal solos, Warren Hall and Laura Gilpatrick; trio, Alice Eleanor Hall, William Whynnaught and Laura Gilpatrick.

There was also singing by the entire group and a baseball game provided some surprising plays.

Among those attending the reunion were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hall of Rockland; Mrs. Alice Locke of Rumford; Blaine Hall of South Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gilpatrick and children, Claude, Jr., John and Laura, of Gattineau, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas J. Hall and children Cora and Alice of Crossfield, Alberta; Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln J. Perry and daughter, Clara Jane Dick of Rumford; Dr. B. W. Trask of Rumford, and son Dr. B. W. Trask, Jr., of Jersey City; Mrs. Alice Louise Hall and son James of Newcastle; Mrs. Angeline Clifford and sons Preston and Noyes of Newcastle; Mr. and Mrs. William Whynnaught and son William, Jr., of Norwood, Mass.; J. Artell Hall, Mr. and Mrs. George Hall and son, George, Jr., of Newcastle; George A. Huston of Damariscotta; Mrs. Lela Carrigan of Portland; Nicholas Caciara of Rumford and Hadley Howell of Newcastle.

ANNUAL STATE CAMP

Twelve 4-H Boys and Girls Will Represent Each County

One hundred sixty-eight 4-H boys and girls, 12 from each county in Maine, and 12 local club leaders have been selected to take part in the sixth annual state camp and short course at the University of Maine, Aug. 19 to 23.

Classes in poultry, crops, rope work, dairy judging and showing, cooking, clothing, and home improvement are among the subjects planned.

Recreational activities will include organized field and track events, instrumental and vocal musical training, campfire programs, a final candle-lighting ceremony Saturday night, Aug. 22, and outdoor church services on Sunday, with Joseph Chapman, of Philadelphia, Pa., as guest speaker.

RECREATIONAL AREAS

Dr. Earl A. Prichard of New York, representing the National Park Service, is working with the Maine State planning board on a program of recreational planning for Maine, particularly the establishing of parks and recreational areas. In that connection Prichard has conferred with Gov. Brann, Maine development Commission officials, consultant Alfred Mullikin, of the Planning board, and prominent citizens of Rockland, Bangor, Bar Harbor, Skowhegan, Portland, and other population centers.

BURNING OF THE ROYAL TAR

Story Of How Circus Menagerie Was Wrecked Off Fox Islands, Told For New Generation

Interest in the burning of the Royal Tar, menagerie ship, off Fox Islands, has been strongly revived since the Maine poet Wilbert Snow asked for the date. The first reply came from Sidney L. Winslow of Vinalhaven, who wrote:

"I suppose you have had dozens of answers to your request for the date of the Royal Tar disaster, but in case you haven't, here it is.

"The Royal Tar left St. John for Eastport and Portland on Friday, Oct. 21, 1936, and because of a severe northwest gale arising she lay in Eastport several days waiting for the gale to subside, resuming her journey on Tuesday, Oct. 25. When the steamer was out but a short time the gale returned with renewed violence and Capt. Reed sought the lee of the Fox Islands where he anchored his ship. The Royal Tar had been at anchor only about half an hour when fire was discovered 'tween decks near the smokestacks and—well—you know the rest.

"In unearthing data for my book 'Fish Hash' I have found several versions of this famous disaster some of which sound like 'old wives' tales' which probably they are. The one that seems the most consistent is Capt. Reed's own story which I found in an old Boston Globe.

"I have recently made two pictures to resemble old prints, one of the Royal Tar as she looked before her destruction and another as she was supposed to look while burning. These pictures are in colors and were enlarged from the newspaper cuts used in conjunction with Capt. Reed's story in the Globe."

C. E. McIntire of Camden, writes: "In your issue of the 16th you ask for information as to the burning of the steamer Royal Tar.

"Enclosed find clipping from the Press Herald, State of Maine edition, (1935 I think, but possibly '34).

"I was induced to save this clipping as my mother, Frances Ann

Witherspoon, witnessed from Butter Isle (now Dirigo) the burning of this ship. Mother was then about 13 years old.

"If this clipping gives the information you desire I will be pleased."

Although the story has several times been republished in The Courier-Gazette, years ago, the clipping kindly sent by Mr. McIntire is here reproduced for the benefit of a generation to which the disaster is unknown.

One of the strangest and most grotesque of Maine coast disasters is the now almost forgotten burning of the St. John to Portland steamer, Royal Tar, Oct. 25, 1836, between Vinalhaven and Isle au Haut, with a traveling circus and 93 persons on board, of whom more than 30 lost their lives.

Perhaps there may be some foundation for the old maritime superstition that a voyage begun on Friday will meet misfortune—at least the fate of the Royal Tar was in keeping with it. A new 160 foot steamship built that year after the latest side-wheel model, and noted for her speed, she set sail from her home port on her last trip with 72 passengers and a crew of 22 men. On board also were Burgess's collection of serpents and birds; a variety of animals including an elephant, a royal Bengal tiger, two lionesses, two dromedaries, agnu and six horses, as well as Dexter's locomotive museum and a brass band.

When the Royal Tar left St. John for Eastport and Portland Friday, Oct. 21, the morning was fine in every respect; but before the day ended a western gale arose which compelled the little steamer to remain in Eastport until the following Tuesday, such was the violence of the wind and the fury of the seas. Not until Tuesday afternoon the 25th did her captain, Thomas Reed of St. John, deem it prudent to leave the harbor;

MAXINE ELLIOTT'S CHATEAU

To Be Occupied By King Of England In August—Story Of a Famous Beauty

The King of England is going to have a vacation in the month of August, and will spend it at the famed Chateau de l'Horizon on the Riviera.

The foregoing statement is only mildly interesting to the residents of Rockland, Me., until it becomes known that the chateau is the home of the former stage star Maxine Elliott, who prior to seeking fame behind the footlights made her home in this city and was known as Jessica Dermot. The ex-actress has never visited her old home since fortune smiled upon her, but she has maintained a desultory correspondence with a few of her old friends and relatives, and interest in her blazed anew with a feature story which appeared over the signature of Padriac King in the Boston Sunday Globe, the story carrying among other illustrations a picture of the house in Rockland (not Rockport, as the article stated) where she was born.

To judge from the story England's high society is in a furore over the choice made by its royal ruler, and tongues have wagged busily and bitterly. From the story, which is an extended one, the following extracts are taken:

"The caterwauling, chattering, and cackling among the socialites of John Bull's domain, got under way as soon as they read the court circular announcement:

"The King will, at the end of July, leave for a holiday in Cannes, where he will probably stay until the beginning of September. The Chateau de l'Horizon, at Golfe Juan, has been taken for him."

British society, which usually relapses into a serene and stuporous state during the warm months, got one eye of the foregoing, gasped, and then let out a long eerie shriek, which almost rattled Nelson loose from his moorings in Trafalgar Square.

"My word! The Chateau de l'Horizon belongs to an American woman, an actress, Maxine Elliott!"

That was "the fly in the cream" for the Grade A aristocrats of Old England. His Britannic Majesty had chosen the home of a Rockland, Me. girl, born Jessica Dermott, for his holiday. Conferring upon an outsider—why, she had even been educated in Boston, the same town where they once had a "Tea Party"—the greatest of all social distinctions, making the home of a commoner the British Royal Residence, King Edward certainly upset the calm of all the noblemen and noblewomen of his realm.

True, no one questioned the necessity of the King having a temporary release from his arduous labors of the last six months, though that did not keep the socially-prominent from thinking that His Majesty might have chosen the home of some British aristocrat for his holiday.

A witty French scribe, the London correspondent of a Paris news sheet, characterized the conversion of Miss Elliott's villa into a temporary Royal residence as "the first whiff of the New Deal, blowing from America." He added that the social as well as the financial and the political Tories might well fear the British ruler's graceful gesture, since it clearly indicated more shocks of a similar nature for those in high places.

And, indeed, it is a far cry from the days when Jessica Dermott graduated from the Notre Dame Academy in Boston to a position of supreme prominence in the exclusive social world of Britain.

Though a host of American women—Mrs. "Jimmy" Corrigan, Mrs. Ormand Lawson—Johnston, Mrs. "Bill" Hamilton, Countess Barbara Hutton Reventlow, and others—all amply supplied with American—earned dollars, belong to the Mayfair set, not a single one has achieved a moiety of the social fame enjoyed by Maxine Elliott.

In some ways it is the most interesting house on the Cote d'Azur, representing as it does an amazing triumph of brains and energy over nature. It was some six years ago that Maxine Elliott saw this little strip of coast, found it very good, indeed, and decided to build a villa where she might quietly spend the twilight of her years.

But everybody characterized her house-building project as a mad financial venture, because the main railway line, over which passes the Monte Carlo Blue Train and all the Riviera expresses, ran within a few yards of the back.

But Maxine Elliott found two brilliant architects, one Col. Eric Sawyer, an Englishman, and the other Barry Diercks, a young American, both of whom had set a pace for modernism in building.

Knowing exactly what she wanted in the way of a house, and having some experience in the building line—she had supervised the construction of a marble-front theatre in the Times square district of New York city, which has borne her name now for a quarter of a century—the actress went into a huddle with the pair of architects and the three set about solving the problem of that railway.

They lowered levels, they built immense walls, they experimented with sound-proof materials, and little by little they beat the railway. Behind the grounds is still the railway line, but no one in the villa would know it, because Miss Elliott had a sound-proof wall built, and in order to get to the house guests have to drive over a railway bridge, the only private railway bridge in France, which cost the owner of the villa a small fortune to construct.

One example of the ingenuity of the architectural triad—Sawyer, Diercks and Elliott—is to be found in the hall, which is very lofty and furnished with immense windows of very thick glass, arranged in diamond lozenges. They are lovely windows and they let in all the light, but keep out all the sound. When one enters the hall, one walks in silence. All that one hears is the lapping of the waves on the rocks below the terrace outside.

In front of the villa is a tiny garden with a patch of real grass, which on the Riviera is as precious as a rare carpet. Then there is an immense bathing pool, rocks, the sea, and the sun. Every facility was created by Miss Elliott in her designs for living in the open air during the warmest weather.

The bathing pool, carved out of the solid rock, is built just below the guest rooms, and is filled with sea water. It opens just off the balconied dining room and has its own cocktail bar and a sheltered terrace all round where mattresses and long chairs are arranged and where American bagatelle, backgammon and bridge are played between dips into briny.

There is a chute down from the bathing pool to the sea, dropping about 30 feet—a great attraction for the adventurous. Whether King Edward will be daring enough to use the waterchute is a question being asked by those who have stayed at the Chateau de l'Horizon.

As to the Chateau de l'Horizon, there has been since its erection a never-ending guessing contest as to its cost and upkeep. It is an establishment conducted along the most lavish lines, and has been the scene of some of the most notable house parties in the history of international society. It has on occasions been referred to as "an annex of the House of Lords," and at other times as "The Rest Home for Three British Peers."

It is a slow day, indeed, at Chateau de l'Horizon, when one can't find under its hospitable roof at least a couple of Dukes, Earls or Marquises and their ladies, with a literary lion or two and a world-famous financier thrown in for good measure.

Probably no private house in the world boasts a guests' roster graced by so many well-known and distinguished names as that of the Chateau de l'Horizon. Trug, one might not come upon the names of the Archbishop of Canterbury, William "Pussyfoot" Johnson, Gen. Evangeline Booth or Queen Mary.

But there are others to conjure with—Alfonso at Spain, at present unemployed, Prince von Starhemberg of Vienna, King George of Greece, all the Grand Dukes and Duchesses that ever came out of Russia, the former Crown Prince of Germany, the Aga Khan, the Maharajah of Kashmir, the Gaekwar of Baroda.

THE HOUSE AND THE ROAD

The little Road says, Go.
The little House says, Stay.
And O, it's bonny here at home,
But I must go away.
The little Road, like me,
Would seek and turn and know;
And forth I must, to learn the things
The little Road would show!
And go I must, my dears,
And journey while I may,
Through heart be sore for the little House.
That had no word but Stay.
Maybe, no other way
Your child could ever know
Why a little House would have you stay,
When a little Road says, Go.

CELEBRATING GEN. KNOX

Official announcement of the impending annual celebration of the birthday anniversary of Gen. Henry Knox, serves to renew in the public mind an interest that of right attaches to the life and achievements of this great citizen, so conspicuous a figure in the War of the Revolution.

This paper has held it a privilege to keep before its readers everywhere the story of the zealous citizens of Thomaston and adjacent towns, who, supported by money-gifts of the generous-hearted, have made it possible to create, here in this ancient and beautiful Colonial town, a Shrine adequate to the man it celebrates, and serving to turn hither increasingly year by year the feet of the patriotic, pausing thus to pay honor to a name and deeds imperishable.

Already in the present season of travel the number of visitors registered at Montpelier much exceeds the registration of previous years, and they continue to come. The public celebration this week should measurably add to this growing general interest, and by that much further lend encouragement to the Daughters of the American Revolution and public-spirited citizens generally who in various capacities have helped create in Montpelier a foremost place of visitation in Maine, the story of which is rapidly penetrating to the far corners of the Union and beyond, earning it place among the foremost public shrines of the United States.

POLITICAL BRIEFS

London's Notification

The official program for London's notification ceremonies July 23, provides a full day of activities for all visitors, ending with a fireworks display on the State House grounds after the speech at night. The two popular events of the day, prior to the formal notification ceremony, are an Indian dance at noon and the afternoon parade, to be symbolic of Kansas and the history of the prairie states. More than 300 Indians, representing 41 tribes from Kansas and eight neighboring states, will take part in the Indian celebration at noon at the Kansas Fair Grounds, where an Indian village will be established.

Knox and Smith

Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice President, expected to hold a conference with Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York "at the first opportunity that offers" he announced on his return home from a visit with his running mate, Governor Alfred M. Landon in Topeka, Kans. Knox has not made any arrangements as yet for the meeting with Smith, but he voiced the hope that it would take place soon after the Vice Presidential notification ceremonies on July 30 and "as soon as my campaign tour takes me to New York." He informed reporters interviewing him on Tuesday that he had several messages from Smith. Asked Thursday what those messages contained, he shook his head and smiled.

Hoover Is Coming

Ex-President Herbert Hoover definitely will come to Maine to join with other leading Republicans in stumping the State for the party, according to Chairman Hamilton of Republican National Committee. At the same time he indicated that there is a possibility that Gov. Landon, the presidential nominee, will include Maine in his New England tour. The leading Republicans are not due in Maine until after Labor Day, but will come before the Maine election.

Members of the National Republican Committee have been advised by Chairman Hamilton that the voters in Maine are strongly against the New Deal but that Gov. Brann, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, enjoys much favor among Maine voters.

Mr. Hamilton has advised the committee members that he believes a Republican victory in Maine will have a good psychological effect on the entire nation.

Farm Journal's Vote

In the initial tabulation of a straw vote conducted by the Farm Journal, a national farm periodical, Gov. Landon received a considerable majority over President Roosevelt with Maine among the States giving the Republican nominee a substantial lead. In Maine, Landon received

Samuel S. Tewksbury

Samuel Staples Tewksbury died at his home here late Saturday afternoon after an illness of five months. Mr. Tewksbury was born at Atkinson, Sept. 17, 1856, son of Jonathan and Priscilla (Staples) Tewksbury, and great grandson of Thomas Tewksbury, a New Hampshire soldier of the Revolution who came to Atkinson, then a wilderness, in 1810. He was married to Emma Ann Royal of Garland, Aug. 14, 1881, and to them were born four children who survive, John L. Tewksbury of Camden, Agnes B. Nason of Bath, Harold J. R. Tewksbury of Westbrook, and Dr. Lewis G. Tewksbury of Stonington. He also leaves a brother, Albert P. Tewksbury of Middlefield, Conn. and eight grandchildren. For his second wife he married Mrs. Flora Patterson of Rockport, who survives him, as also four stepchildren.

As a young man, Mr. Tewksbury worked in the woolen mills at Dexter, but soon after his marriage, worked in Middlefield, Conn. for a few years, afterwards returning to Maine. From 1880 until 1908 he was superintendent of the Cumberland Woolen Mills at Lewiston, coming to Camden in 1908 where he had since made his home at 8 Gould street. Upon first coming to this town he was employed at the Seabright Mill, but for the past 20 years he had conducted an insurance agency.

He was a member of Mt. Battle Lodge of Odd Fellows, and they will conduct the funeral services at the home of his son John L. Tewksbury, Pearl street today at 2 o'clock.

Is "Sanely Progressive"

J. R. McCarl, former Comptroller General, after a visit to Alfred M. Landon at Topeka, predicted the Kansas Governor, if elected President, would give the nation one of the most economical administrations in "many a moon." He said Mr. Landon impressed him as being "sanely progressive, but always on a safe and sound basis—evolution, not revolution, and rehabilitation before reform."

New Deal Debts Will Be Passed On to Others to Pay; Twelve Billions Borrowed Since 1933

By Nicholas Roosevelt

It is characteristic of the New Dealers' contempt for frankness that not only Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau but other apologists for Mr. Roosevelt's extravagance are trying to make out that the increase in the federal debt since March 4, 1933, has been greatly exaggerated.

True, the Republican high command two years ago issued estimates of the cost of the New Deal that were extravagantly foolish. But the actual record of the sums spent is bad enough.

The reports of the Secretary of the Treasury show that during the three years, July 1, 1933, to June 30, 1936, the federal government spent $11,812,000,000 more than it received in revenues. During this same period the national debt increased $11,672,000,000. These figures it should be noted, do not include the period March 4 to June 30, 1933—a period for which satisfactory figures broken down are hard to find.

Let us look at the deficit. How does it compare with the three previous years, and has it varied from year to year?

The Roosevelt deficit for these three years is half again larger than the deficit for the fiscal years 1931, 1932 and 1933 (ending June 30, 1933).

The second Roosevelt year showed a somewhat smaller deficit than the first year, but the third Roosevelt year shows the largest deficit in the peace-time history of the country—$4,674,000,000.

A deficit comes from reduced income or from increased expenditures or both. Most of the Hoover deficits came from decreased income. The federal revenues continued to decline after the depression started. The Roosevelt deficits have been caused largely by increased expenditures—expenditures that have continued to mount at the same time that revenues have reached a new high for all time.—expenditures that make one pause to question the sincerity of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign statement in a speech delivered in Pittsburgh on Oct. 19, 1932, when he said, "I regard reduction in Federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign."

The New Deal defenders endeavor to show that these expenditures have been "extraordinary." They point out that the bonus is largely responsible for the exceptional size of the deficit this year. This is perfectly true. It is equally true that President Roosevelt vetoed the bonus, and that the bonus cannot be regarded as a strictly New Deal measure. But it is likewise true that the bonus was passed by a Congress that had a three to one majority of Democrats over Republicans.

The significant thing is not, however, the precise nature of the different items of extravagance, but rather the fact that largely under Mr. Roosevelt's inspiration, the sky has been the limit for the use of federal funds. He has thrown millions into such utterly foolhardy projects as the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tide harnessing scheme.

Despite Mr. Roosevelt's pre-election statements, the New Deal motto has been "spend, spend, spend!"

What they have spent and have not covered, they have borrowed. The result is that the public debt is now more than double what it was when Mr. Coolidge left office. It is this appalling increase which the New Deal apologists are now trying to minimize. They say that $2,700,000,000 of the $11,674,000,000 debt is cash in the treasury, and therefore recoverable, and that $2,000,000,000 is in the stabilization fund. Another $4,000,000,000 is said to be recoverable because it is in the hands of the R.F.C. and other similar agencies which are merely lending the money.

What are the facts? That the cash in the treasury is there not to pay off the debt but to pay the running expenses of the government; that the stabilization fund is a secret fund, and no one knows whether or not any of it will be intact when Mr. Morgenthau has finished using it; and that the funds repaid to the R.F.C. are being held available for re-investment.

In other words, there is no assurance that these funds will ever be usable against the debt. If they are listed simply as contingent assets, then there must be set off against them contingent liabilities, including home owners' loans, farm mortgages, and other bonds underwritten by the government. Many of these will doubtless be repaid. But no one can say today how large a portion will be defaulted.

The conclusion of the matter is inescapable—that the New Dealers by piling up expenditures and borrowing excessively are laying up future tax burdens for all of us. The money that the government pays out comes from the people—unless, of course, inflation is resorted to and paper money is printed by the bushel. Even then the people ultimately will pay for the financial wreckage.

To attempt, as do the New Dealers, to belittle the dangers of New Deal expenditures is little short of downright dishonest. The New Dealers may be acquiring political credit for themselves in the present world of 1936—but they are laying up financial debts which those who come after 1936 will have to pay. The problem is not only to cut expenses, but to pay for those already incurred.

The day of reckoning has been postponed, but it cannot be evaded. When it arrives, the hymn of hate that will rise up through the country against Franklin D. Roosevelt and his New Deal will not make pleasant hearing for his followers and admirers.

TO SAVE WILD DUCKS

A Year's Reprieve From Hunting Is Demanded By the Audubon Societies

Drought relief for wild ducks, in the form of a year's reprieve from hunting, is demanded by the National Association of Audubon Societies, with a warning that unless there is a cessation in killing the water-fowl herds, but with no similar hope of replacement.

"The vigorous drought-relief measures being undertaken by the Administration on behalf of man and domestic stock will undoubtedly relieve their distress," the statement said, "but what of the wild life of the area—a natural resource worth many millions of dollars? The worst drought conditions have blanketed the very prairie States in which the United States raises most of its wild ducks, and the suffering among them has been extreme."

"For years conservationists have been concerned over the diminution of our water-fowl. Grazing, drainage, overhunting, and recent dry years have reduced their numbers until some species are in grave danger of extermination. The losses occasioned by this new catastrophe cannot be repaired until better breeding seasons combined with requisite limitations of kill have made it possible for the birds to increase their numbers."

"We can't replace the ducks that are gone," the statement concluded. "Only ducks can do this. We can, however, reduce the depletion—by closing the shooting season for a year, thus relieving an enormous drain on our water-fowl resources."

TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Interest Just Now Centers On the Race For Second Position

This Week's Games

Tonight—Thomaston at Camden.
Wednesday—Camden at Rockland.
Thursday—Thomaston at St. George.

Friday—Rockland at Thomaston.
Saturday—St. George at Camden.

The League Standing

The corrected standing finds Camden two and one-half games in the lead, and a very close race on between Rockland and Thomaston for second money. The figures:

	W	L	P.C.
Camden	9	2	.819
Rockland	6	4	.600
Thomaston	5	5	.500
St. George	1	10	.091

At St. George, Saturday, Camden defeated the home team 19 to 12 in an erratic game, which once found St. George entrenched with the comfortable and apparently safe lead of 6 to 1. Sunday's game was in Thomaston, the home team defeating St. George 6 to 3.

Rockland 8, St. George 6

Some excellent amateur baseball was seen at St. George last night, the errors serving only to increase interest as to the outcome. St. George carried the lead until the fourth inning when the Rockland Grays fell upon Pease for five singles, which with a wild throw from center field gave the visitors four runs to offset the four which St. George had made in the second inning.

Mackie's triple in the sixth, scoring Auld, who had walked, brought St. George to within one point of the leaders, and the scoring would not have ceased then but for the fine relay play made by Walter Dimick and Jr. Gay retiring Mackie at the plate. The Grays increased their lead to two runs in the last inning when Dimick, senior walked, stole second, reached third on an error, and scored on Monaghan's overthrow from right field.

There were several noteworthy plays in addition to the one already described. One was a brilliant one hand stop made by Gray at first base on a swiftly thrown ball which went into the earth, and another the long running catch made by Monaghan, which spoiled Gray's chances of ringing up another three-bagger. A running catch by Dimick, Junior, abruptly stopped a threatened St. George rally.

Anderson was high line with the stick last night, making four singles. Mackie, Wiley, Gay and Oney each made three hits.

Maurice Simmons again proved himself a classy first sacker.

The score:

DONKEY BASEBALL, JEFFERSON

The strangest and most colorful baseball attraction of all times is scheduled to make the first appearance at Jefferson A. A. Park this afternoon at 6:30 D.S.T., when two teams, Jack Benner's "Donkey Drivers" meet Harlow Howard's "Burro Busters" in a game of baseball played from the backs of real live donkeys. Jack Benner's "Donkey Drivers" are favored to win due to the fact that they have been riding rocking horses in preparation for the great encounter.

NOTICE TO SAVINGS DEPOSITORS

KNOX COUNTY TRUST COMPANY

ROCKLAND, ME.

The provisions of Section 48, Chapter 57, Banking Laws of Maine, require the State Banking Department to verify pass books of depositors in savings banks and savings depositors in trust companies at least once every three years. The regular verification at the above named institution is now being made by the State Banking Department, and for the sole purpose of correcting errors or omissions you are requested to bring your book, or send, by mail, TO THE BANK promptly. Verification closes July 31, 1936.

THOMAS A. COOPER, Bank Commissioner, Augusta, Me., July 20, 1936. 87,88,90,91

Arthur W. Doherty is back in charge of the Woolworth store, rested and refreshed by his annual vacation.

Miss Pauline McWilliams and Mrs. Marguerite Harris, are on vacation from the Senter Crane store this week.

Judge Edward K. Gould is home from New York, where he attended a conference of regional directors of the Survey of the National Archives.

The Advisory Board of the Knox County Fish and Game Association has a supper and meeting at Drift Inn, Martinsville, Thursday night at 7 o'clock, daylight.

John "Red" Hanafin, driver for Warren Malcolm's stable in Augusta, and well known to Knox County turf fans, was badly injured in a "spill" at the Lewiston race track Saturday.

Vacationists from the City Building the next fortnight include Deputy Marshal Walter J. Fernald of the Police Department and Percy Dinsmore of the Fire Department. Although he doesn't go in much for adventure Walter expects to have several colder shaves.

George A. Harrison who has spoken numerous times before local service clubs and other organizations, and who was responsible for the establishment of the Rockland Kiwanis Club, is a candidate for lieutenant governor of the 8th Division of the New England District of Kiwanis.

A delegation of hardy steamboat men from the S. S. Malang departed Sunday on a deep sea fishing trip, chaperoned by Frank F. Trafton, former Rockland man who is now located in Bucksport. The trip is being made in the power boat Hugh, with Capt. John G. Snow as navigating officer.

Eddie Whalen is bemoaning the loss of a case filled with white jackets belonging to his dance orchestra. The case was lost last Friday either at Vinalhaven or after arrival in this city. Anyone having knowledge of the case can get an extra walk from Whalen's Privateers by telephoning Mr. Whalen at Rockland 8219.

The handsomest cherry tree in Rockland, possibly in the world, may be seen just now on Willis Snow's premises, Lake avenue. The tree is an uncommonly large one for that breed, and is loaded with the rich, red fruit from top to bottom. "Plenty for the birds and everybody else," says Willis, who is just getting about the house again after three weeks of illness.

At the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary last week these committees were appointed: Executive, all officers and Corinne Edwards; Bernice Staples and Ann Alden; Legislative, Ida Huntley; rehabilitation, Adah Roberts; Americanism, Corinne Edwards; welfare, Bernice Jackson and Ella Hyland; war orphans, Grace Kirk; Pledge, Marjorie Jackson; housekeepers, Minnie Smith and Ann Alden; scrap book, Edith Jackson; president of sewing circle, Ann Alden.

The State Banking Department is now engaged in the work of verifying pass books of savings depositors in the Knox County Trust Company, Rockland. The statutes provide that this verification of pass books shall be made at least once in every three years, and is in addition to the regular examination of all state banking institutions. In verifying these pass books, a representative of the Banking Department is stationed at each bank, and will compare the pass books as they are brought in for the purpose of correcting any errors or omissions in the accounts.

W. C. Johnson, superintendent of the North Shore Main Division, Railway Express Agencies, motored through this city yesterday enroute to Bar Harbor and Eastport. The local office of the Company, now located at the railroad station, and recently renovated with fresh paint, was carefully inspected and approved. Mr. Johnson expressed much satisfaction at the increased volume of business handled this year, comparing most favorably over same periods of previous years. Handling of baggage also received particular interest as this is a new service being tried out this season by Railway Express Agencies.

The 62 employees of the Perry Markets, with guests, will go to Swan's Island next Sunday on the annual outing. The proprietor goes there tomorrow as advance man to see if Swan's Island has a ball team which is willing to stake its skill and reputation against the Marketeers, and to make the other necessary arrangements. The Rockland City Band will do the tootin'.

Although not much has been heard about the Camden murder case the past few days it does not mean that the investigation has been dropped. On the contrary the county authorities and State Police have been unceasing in their vigilance. Many persons have been interviewed and stenographic notes made of their testimony. Several suspects are said to have been eliminated, but the work of checking and rechecking still goes on and every clue, no matter how slight, is being given the closest attention.

It looked like old times of the waterfront yesterday with the busiest day of the season at Feyer's. The plant dock was lined with boats several tier deep unloading heavy trips of all types of fish. Three big Georges draggers were in with 3000 gallons of scallops, five fish draggers with thousands of pounds of hake, had dock, sole and other species and several small trawlers. This morning most of the boats were off again after taking on ice from the company's plant and supplies from the various concerns around town. Over $15,000 were paid in cash for these trips and was distributed to a large number of people. This is the busiest season in history for the local plant which is growing rapidly and assuming an important place in the ranks of the fish companies of New England.

A Code Of Ethics

Professional men must serve humanity unselfishly, placing such service before personal gain. The traditions of the funeral directing profession are rooted in this principle; our strict code of ethics defines in complete detail the duties of the funeral director to his clients and to the community. We serve everyone, regardless of social position or financial capacity, to the best of our ability.

HINTS TO MOTORISTS

Wise Car Owner Will Make Sure All's Well Before Starting On Tour

Millions of motorists will take to the open road this summer for vacation trips. Some will start with no preliminary preparation of their cars, others will make sure beforehand that all is well mechanically. The chances of enjoying a 100 percent pleasurable tour are strongly with those who carefully groom their cars for the trip. In fact, "tune up before you tour" is advice that, if followed, will do more than any other one thing to make a motor trip a real pleasure trip.

Many drivers who use their cars daily for only a few miles in their regular routine, with never any trouble, do not realize that a car that seems to work well in the city may be quite unfit to undertake long distance trips. Little faults that need correction remain unnoticed through months of ordinary driving; when the car is suddenly called upon to work at full power over long periods, these little faults may develop into bigger faults that detract largely from the fun of motoring.

Both safety and pleasure are at stake when vacationists start out without having their car carefully inspected and its faults corrected. The principal safety items of course, are brakes and steering—and in most cases simple adjustments are all that they require. Good tires are required for both safety and pleasure. All lights should have good bulbs, and headlight beams must be properly adjusted. New windshield wiper blades are not costly, but are of much value when needed.

For comfort and uninterrupted pleasure, everything should be done that will guarantee continuous travel without enforced halts. A motor-tune-up is one of the best of precautionary measures. The battery should be checked carefully, and the generator charging rate adjusted for long distance running at good speed. A complete change of lubricants in crankcase, transmission and rear axle is recommended and, of course, a thorough greasing of the chassis. Shock absorbers always are subjected to severe use on a vacation trip over strange roads, and should be adjusted before the departure.

For some strange reason, vacation motorists are always greatly surprised to find that cars that have seemed all right at home "heat up" as soon as they get out in the open road. They have overlooked the fact that the faster the run and the heavier the pull, the more heat the engine develops, and that the cooling system that was good enough for runs to the office and the country club may not be up to the job of carrying off several times as much heat on a long climb in the mountains. To function properly, the cooling system must allow free circulation of the water, which calls for a clean radiator and good rubber connections with renewed or tightened pump packing. Highly important too, is the proper adjustment of the fan belt, which on long, fast runs must carry a far greater load than in city driving.

Incidentally bodies that seem dead silent on city boulevards often reveal an astounding variety of squeaks and rattles when the car really gets going. It will add a lot to the vacationist's happiness if he will have the body bolts tightened, door hinges and catches tightened and oiled and everything made snug.

There will be more motor touring this year than ever before. And there will be a lot of pleasure for millions of tourists—especially for the drivers who carefully groom their cars for the trip before they start.

Douglas Fairbanks and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, 3d, best known as Lady Ashley, Lord Strabolgi, the Duke of Westminster, not to say anything of the Duke of Kent—and now the King of England!

Miss Elliott seems to have a yen for the bright young chaps of the book-writing game, since she has dined and wined doves of them.

There was a time, however, when notables courteously declined invitations to the noted Chateau, fearing that if they went there they would be bitten by one of the former actress' pet monkeys, of which she kept a flock. But those days are over, and so are the days of the monkeys, as a result of the simians' proclivities for biting the white legs of titled ladies. King Edward VIII may sojourn at his ease in the chateau, for there is no danger of a macaque leaping from behind some eucalyptus tree and taking a bite out of his royal flesh.

For those of the present generation the name of Maxine Elliott means nothing. She was not of their day. She was famous on Broadway when people knew really what they were talking about when they likened the lights of that thoroughfare to bubbles in champagne, and toasted her in the beverage. She quit the American stage practically simultaneously with the banishment from the American scene of legal liquor.

Miss Elliott is not now the young woman of whom Ethel Barrymore is said to have exclaimed in 1903, "The Venus de Milo—with arms!" She has given ample evidence, however, of her ability to retain the charm and to present a more mature type of beauty which made her nationally renowned in her younger stage days.

She made her last American appearance there 16 years ago as Cordelia in "Trimmed in Scarlet." Then she announced that she was through with acting and was going to live in Europe. She made good that promise and her only visits to the United States since were one during the winter of 1924-25 and another just three years ago.

Nor can one blot out the memories of the lovely creature before her

Goodwinian days, when she starred in Augustin Daly's company and afterward here and abroad, making so great a hit across the sea that King Edward the Seventh was said to have led the applause throughout the performance he attended.

There are other admirable memories of her too, wartime memories of her work among the wounded and in civilian relief.

Her triumphant emergence as a luminary of the American stage was when Augustin Daly engaged her in 1895, and with him she played in Shakespearean roles.

In 1897, playing a summer engagement in San Francisco, she met the comedian, Nat Goodwin—a native Bostonian, a product of that city's West End—and in 1898 they were married. She was his third wife. For several years thereafter they were co-stars in England, America and Australia, among their best known plays being "Nathan Hale," "An American Citizen," "The Cowboy and the Lady" and "When We Were Twenty-One."

The truth of the matter is that Miss Elliott had no heart for the theatre. This she frankly admitted during her last visit to the United States in 1933. On that occasion, she said:

"I never really liked the theatre. I just happened to be in it. Night after night I have played in successes. They became drearier and drearier. They gave me my theatre. They provided for me so well that I was able to give a relative $500,000 and she got it while I was still living. But they were hopeless, deadening things. Anyone who has the task of interviewing a former actress of repute might just as well be an undertaker. My idea of real happiness is to find some small corner of the world, crawl into it, and never again see my name in the paper until the time comes for me to die."

Instead of crawling into some small corner of the world, Miss Elliott is now luxuriously established in the Chateau de l'Horizon, and because of that, together with that little matter of King Edward's vacation, her name is once more very much in the news.

WARREN

Rehearsal for the bi-centennial pageant will start sharply at 5 daylight Thursday night at the pageant grounds. Cars will leave the Baptist Church at 4:30. It is important that every member of the cast be present. If rainy, Thursday, the full rehearsal will be the following night at the same hours.

Miss Mary Blake of Union is employed at the home of Mrs. J. R. Meserve at Pleasantville.

Mrs. Annie Watts and Mrs. Myrtle Broadman are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gilman in Providence. Vernon Packard, who recently finished a four months engineering course at M. I. T. in Boston, is employed at Kennebunkport.

Kenneth Ogier, who has been clerking in a chain store in Thomaston, has been transferred to Skowhegan. His brother, Leon Ogier of Skowhegan, accompanied by Mrs. Alma Richardson and daughter Miss Bernice Richardson motored for him Sunday and were guests for the day of Mrs. Nora Russell.

Because of the rehearsal of the pageant Thursday night, the supper at the Congregational Chapel by the Ladies' Circle is postponed to 6 o'clock Saturday. The committee includes, Mrs. Alvah Simmons, Mrs. Laura Starrett, Mrs. W. H. Robinson, Mrs. Fred Mathews, Mrs. William Barrows, Mrs. Sidney Wyllie, Mrs. Evelyn Vining, Miss Frances Spear and Miss Mary Wyllie.

Overnight guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Watts were Mrs. Arlene Dennison and daughter Lucille, her brother-in-law, Amos Dennison, and her mother, Mrs. Marcia Bowden, all of Cutler.

Mr. and Mrs. William Barrett went Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Carlton F. Green of Weymouth, Mass., on a week's motor trip to the Gaspe Peninsula.

Visiting hours at the Knox Arboretum will be from 8 to 6 p. m. daylight. Have you noticed the beautiful new sign erected by the Knox Academy of Arts and Sciences a few feet from the Warren-Thomaston bridge on Route 1? Measuring 15 feet in length and 8 feet in width, painted in each of the four corners are objects of nature interest such as a perky squirrel vivid bluebird, cocky king-fisher and longnecked blue heron. Mr. Lermond, the curator, is busily making ready for the dedication exercises to be held Aug. 21, and has made much progress. The marine room in the upper story of the building is acquiring beauty rapidly, the case containing coral specimens of particular interest. To visit the arboretum and the art and science building is always to learn some new and interesting thing about Dame Nature.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stickney are their son and daughter-in-law, and their younger son, Mr. and Mrs. William Stickney and son William of Framingham, Mass. Miss Eley Sawyer and Miss Eula Skinner are attending the summer session at the University of Maine.

Mrs. Gordon Dodge of Lowell, Mass., is guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Batchelder. Mr. Dodge who also was guest recently, has returned home.

Mrs. Abbie (Rines) Storer, her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell H. Lass of Leandro, Calif., and Mrs. A. S. Slack of Philadelphia are spending a few weeks at the Nancy Spear place, South Warren.

Miss Virginia Wyllie, Alfred Wyllie, Robert Wyllie and guests, Miss Pauline Hudson, Miss Eleanor Cook, and Arlington Hudson all of Mansfield, Mass., dined Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Butler.

A party honoring the 21st birthday anniversary of Roger Teague was given Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wyllie with 50 guests present. The guest of honor received a decorated cake made by Miss Tena McCallum, a gift of money, and several other gifts from the large gathering, which included the Baptist Choir. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Avis Norwood, Mrs. Jennie Kenniston, and Mrs. Ruth Perry. Games and music were enjoyed, Miss Pauline Hudson and twin brother Arlington Hudson of Mansfield, Mass., singing several selections, and the men of the party also joined in the musical entertainment. Present were: Mrs. Isa Teague, Arnold Teague, Miss Olive Teague, Misses Edna and Shirley Howard of Waldoboro, Mrs. Doris Overlock and six children, Mrs. Avis Norwood and three daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Kenniston and three children, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Perry and four children. Rev. and Mrs. Howard A. Welch, Howard Welch Jr., Mrs. E. V. Oxtom, son Paul and daughter Miss Elizabeth, Fred Kenniston, Miss Helen Starrett, Miss Janet Wade, Miss Kathryn Peabody. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wyllie and family, Roger Teague, of this town, Misses Pauline Hudson, Eleanor Cook, and Arlington Hudson of Mansfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Hatch and sons Leonard and Ralph, of Arlington, Mass., and Mrs. Edna Beal and sons Frank and Robert of Phillips were at Ye Pine Spill Friday.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

TAKE YOUR CAMERA ON VACATION TRIPS

Pictorial beauty and scenes of human interest may be captured almost anywhere by the vacationist who keeps his camera ready, as shown in these pictures taken on an automobile tour. The picture-taker stopped the car, instead of whizzing by.

AS EVERYBODY knows, one of the important pleasures of a vacation trip is talking about it after-wards. It is a rare person who has no desire to tell his friends what a "grand" time he had, of the places he visited, the beautiful scenery, the interesting people he met, and various entertaining experiences. If he is a good raconteur with the ability to make word pictures, his friends are likely to listen for quite a while, but, on the other hand, if he doesn't know how to tell his story interestingly, he may have to give in to bored "Yeah's," or a counter attack from his listener who, the chances are, has been on a vacation trip himself, and wants to tell his story.

However marvelous and interesting a trip is, and however well one is able to describe it, in the course of time the memory of it becomes dim, too vague to be inspiring any longer even to oneself. How much are you now able to tell about scenes, people and places on your first auto tour, say fifteen years ago?

There is only one sure way to keep these memories from fading and that is to take a camera with you on your trip and take pictures. With a camera, at least a half dozen rolls of film and a determination to take advantage of all picture-taking opportunities, you can create a picture story of your trip that no words, written or spoken, can tell so vividly, and it will live. You always will enjoy looking at these pictures—and, as to telling the story to your friends—be sure they will always be ready to look when they won't listen!

Too often it happens that when starting on a vacation trip, he who has a camera neglects to take it along, or, if he does, too often fails to take advantage of picture opportunities. For example, it is easy, when one is rolling along the road in an automobile to let an interesting or beautiful scene go by without stopping the car.

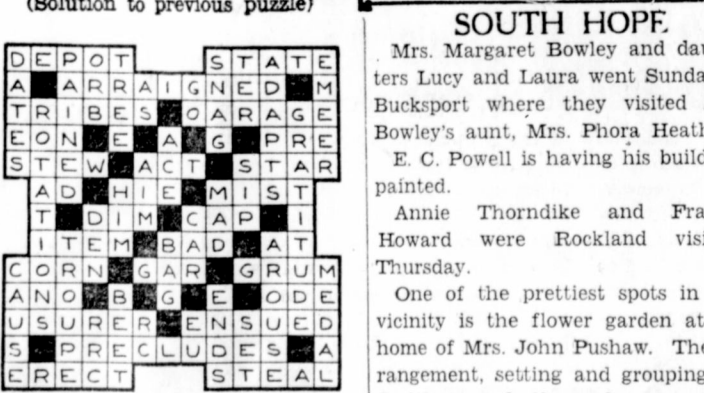

Make up your mind before you start on a vacation tour, whether by automobile or otherwise, that you are going to bring back a picture record of the principal and most interesting things you see; and tell any traveling companions without a camera that when you see a good picture they must give you the chance to get it. Remind them that this is a pleasure trip, and, especially if you go by auto, that this business of whizzing by the scenery just to get to the next place in the quickest time is silly. Impress upon them that stopping to record an interesting picture will be worth incompensably more in permanent value than the few minutes gained at the end of a day's journey. Get the pictures as you go.

THE HOME GARDEN

Timely Information For Home Gardeners Prepared By Members Of The Faculty Of The University Of Maine

Many a gardener has shuddered with disgust when he has reached for a tomato and come in contact with a cold, clammy, green worm three or four inches in length with a long, wicked looking horn curving upward and back from the tail end of its body. This insect is the tomato hornworm.

In spite of its dangerous appearance the hornworm is entirely harmless in regard to its ability to inflict injury on humans. Dr. J. H. Hawkins of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station assures us. The tomato hornworm sometimes does considerable damage but seldom becomes abundant enough in Maine to entirely destroy large plantings of tomatoes.

The adult of the hornworm is a large, greyish, swift-flying moth, often found at dusk sucking the nectar from flowers.

Its large size makes it conspicuous so that it can usually be picked off by hand and crushed beneath the foot. Parasites often kill the caterpillars and hornworms found dead should not be crushed for fear of killing the parasites. One of the common parasites of this pest is the grub of a small wasp-like creature which lives inside the hornworm until nearly mature and then eats its way through the skin and forms numerous small whitish cocoons on the outside of the caterpillar.

Arsenate of lead used at the rate of 3 pounds to 40 gallons of water will control the tomato hornworm. Calcium arsenate 1½ pounds, 40 gallons of water, and 4 or 5 pounds of hydrated lime is also effective. For those who prefer it, a dust consisting of 1 part of arsenate of lead to 3 parts of hydrated lime can be used. If calcium arsenate is used as a dust it should be diluted with 4 or 5 parts of hydrated lime. Lead arsenate or calcium arsenate should not be used after the tomatoes are set on the vines unless the fruit can be thoroughly cleansed of arsenical residue before being used for human consumption.

A dust containing ½ of 1 per cent rotenone is an effective remedy for hornworm injury to tomatoes and since it is non-poisonous to humans or other warm blooded animals it can be used safely even after the tomatoes are ripening on the vines.

The Northeastern Poultry Producers Council meets at the University of Maine, Orono, August 26-27, for its sixth annual summer conference. Representatives of thirteen states, from Virginia to Maine, will attend.

Pirates Win Decision In 13-Inning Game — Dragons Still On Top

Sunday's results: Pirates 7, South Thomaston 6 (13 innings); Chisox 5, Thomaston 6.

This week's games

Tuesday—Dragons at Chisox.

Wednesday—Pirates at Warren.

Thursday—South Thomaston at Thomaston.

Chisox	5	8	.000

Tips from the Dugouts

Vince Carr easily had the edge over Bob Gardner in that marathon at Community Park Sunday. Bob was rapped for 20 solid hits and fanned 3. Vince allowed less than a hit an inning and fanned 15. But the Keag made 9 errors.

Incidentally the Pirates must have set up some kind of a record in that game. They turned in 25 assists. And only three bobbles. Its fielding alone that has kept them in the race.

The Chisox almost snared their first victory Sunday. They enjoyed a 4 to 0 lead and blew it to lose 6-5.

The Dragons and Warren had played 2 innings with a 1 to 1 score when Juke Pluvius opened up. The game will be played as a double header later.

Somebody's winning streak will be snapped Wednesday night. The Pirates with six in a row invade Warren who have won four.

TOOK ANOTHER SCALP

The Vinalhaven Chiefs scored six runs in the first inning of Sunday's game, but needed only one of them, as the score finally stood 10 to 4. The official score shows that Camden was out and outfielded. Long hits were made by Wheeler and Woodcock. The score:

At Union Church Sunday morning, Mrs. Earle of Philadelphia was soloist. A special anthem was sung by the choir with solo by H. L. Coombs. Mrs. Elliott Hall was organist.

Mrs. Edith Bratz and sons Robert and Donald of Renova, Pa., Mrs. John Schilling of Williamsport, Pa., and Mrs. Kent Martin of Galetton, Pa., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hall.

Mrs. Pauline Schofield and children of Rockland are visiting her mother, Mrs. A. U. Patterson.

Sawin Pierce of Boston arrived Sunday.

Mrs. Faustina Roberts of Rockland is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Roberts for a visit.

Vinal Daley, formerly of this town, was in town last week after three years of service with the United States Marines in the Philippine Islands.

A large group of Vinalhavenites—past and present—were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Allen Foster at their home in Milford, N. H. Sunday. Mrs. Carrie Cassie, who is visiting in Boston, was guest of honor. Others present were: Misses Polly and Minnie Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Groth, Mrs. Elizabeth Carlson, Charles Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, Mr. and Mrs. William Coffin, Miss Louise Coffin, Herbert Coffin, and Mrs. Raymond Clouette. Boating, croquet, and a bounteous lunch, served on the spacious veranda, were thoroughly enjoyed.

IF YOU WOULD QUALIFY

For Soil Building Payments You Must Plant Between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15.

Farmers who wish to qualify for soil building payments under the agricultural conservation program by planting forest trees should place their orders now with commercial nurseries or the state nursery at Ornoo, says A. D. Nutting, forestry specialist in the Extension Service. The planting must be done between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15, Mr. Nutting says, to meet requirements of the program. Plantings on heavy clay soil, if frost heaving is severe, should be made in the spring. Subject to regulations governing the amount of a farmer's soil building allowance, $5 an acre will be paid for new plantings of 1000 or more trees per acre. The following species and rates of planting per acre have been recommended by the State conservation committee. In pine sections with light soils, 500 red pine and 500 white pine in areas where blister rust is not controlled and in spruce sections, 500 red pine and 500 of either red, white, or Norway spruce. Pine transplants should be at least two years old; spruce should be at least three.

Mr. and Mrs. John Carey of Jamestown, R. I., are visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity. One of Mr. Carey's most enjoyable calls was on his former school teacher, Mrs. Nancy J. Tribou.

SARAH ARNOLD SAWYER

In the death of Mrs. Sarah Arnold Sawyer Saturday a long, useful life was brought to a close. Mrs. Sawyer was born April 14, 1853, in Camden, daughter of Cyrenus and Eliza (Holmes) Crockett. The family moved to Rockland while Sarah was an infant, and the deceased spent her life here. Many years were passed at The Highlands, and in that community she was particularly loved and cherished. Later she went to make her home with a daughter, Mrs. Carrie Gray, on Broad street.

Mrs. Sawyer was blessed with a cheery happy disposition which carried much joy into other lives. She was a true homemaker and devoted to all within the home. A keen sense of humor carried her over many of the rough places which are in all lives, and her zest for enjoyment with those around her never failed her, even after ill health befell her some time ago. This period of ill health and even her final hours, accompanied by much suffering, were borne with fortitude. One of her happiest days of her last year was her birthday, when she was remembered with a card shower and many gifts. She had the care of a devoted daughter with whom she had made her home for several years.

She is survived by this daughter, Mrs. Gray, and one other, Mrs. Flora Marsh of Newcastle, Del., and one son, Ambrose Arnold of Waterville; also by eight grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held on Wednesday at 2 p. m. from the Gray residence, 6 Broad street.

THE VILLAGE STREET

(For The Courier-Gazette)
Let my feet at Life's sunset hour
Find a village street where tall trees tower
And form an arch o'er some quiet way
Where peace descends at the close of day
And let me live on this village street
Where every one is a friend we meet.
And quaint white houses with clean-swept walks
Lead up to doors banked with hollyhocks.
Through the trees let me glimpse the sea
As blue as the sky and as wild and free
As the gulls that swoop o'er it and dip
Deep as this very heart of mine.
So at the sunset of my day
Guide my feet along some quiet way
Where the grass is soft and tall trees
Over an old Maine village street.

ROCKLAND, MAINE

TWO HUNDRED YEARS OLD

Town Of Warren Rich In Historical Lore, Is To Celebrate Next Week

There's excitement in every Warren household this week because of the bi-centennial celebration which will be Thursday and Friday, July 30 and 31.

Thursday, July 30, will be devoted to sports and will include track in which juniors and seniors may participate, skeet shooting, archery, Girl Scout drill, greased pig race, and an old timer's ball game. The historical address, and memorial service will be held on the evening of the same day, at the Baptist Church, with Judge E. K. Gould of Rockland, delivering the address. On the same program, Robert P. Tristram Coffin, Maine poet and a member of the faculty of Bowdoin College, will read a group of poems. The Rev. Howard A. Welch, pastor of the Baptist Church and Rev. H. I. Holt, pastor of the Congregational Church will unite in the memorial services which will be accompanied by suitable music arranged by the chorus.

Friday, the 31st, will also be a full day. Ellis Spear, Jr., of Newton Centre, Boston patent attorney, and descendant of the original Robert Spear, one of the first settlers of the town, will speak briefly at the antique exhibit at Town Hall at 9:30 a. m. A band concert will be given at 10 o'clock. The principal event of the afternoon will be a colorful historical pageant, "Pictures From the Past" given out of doors in the Sherburne Kallach field, with several hundred in the cast. Accompanying this will be band music and a huge chorus. Of decided interest for both days will be the antique exhibit at Town Hall, and the old-time picture exhibit at Mathews Memorial Library, and the Warren Industries exhibit at the Spear Toy Shop. The final event of the celebration will be the grand ball to be held Friday evening in Glover hall.

Some Historical Sites

Places of historical interest will be visited by former residents of Warren, who will instinctively turn to some tangible object to connect the present town with that of 200 years ago. No better way to do this than visiting the "Old Settlers' Cemetery" two and a half miles down river. The old slate stones are rapidly becoming crumbled and some of the inscriptions are not legible but there are a few which still can be read and which can be traced in Eaton's Annals. We can still find the following: John Boggs, second son of Samuel and Anna Boggs, who died Dec. 21, 1773. The epitaph on the stone is typical of that day.

Hugh Scott who drew lot six lies buried there. His wife was Margaret Starrett, daughter of William and Mary (Gamble) Starrett.

Thomas Kilpatrick who drew lot 49 is buried there. He was captain of the first militia organized in St. Georges as Warren was then known, and was in command of a block house above Fort St. Georges in Thomaston.

Mary Gamble Starrett's grave bears bravely its marker. Mr. Starrett drew lot 38 but died in Woburn, Mass. His widow returned to Upper St. Georges and died at the advanced age of 86 years.

Of particular interest to the present town of Thomaston is the grave of John Shibles, who worked so ardently for the incorporation of the town of Thomaston after Warren became incorporated, but died in February, 1777, before his ideas were realized. Thomaston received her incorporation papers the following March.

James Lermond's stone can be deciphered. He was the son of Alexander and Mary Lermond, who settled at Oyster River. Archibald Gamble's grave is clearly marked. He drew lot 40 and was father of Mary Starrett, wife of William Starrett.

Dr. John Martin Schaeffer (Shepherd in English) is buried there. It was he who preached the first sermon at the German Lutheran Church in Waldoboro. There was a remarkable career as it seen by scanning the annals. He also was a doctor and practiced bloodletting, charging 50 cents a head I believe for this service.

The grave of John McLean is there. He drew lot 13 and was the first death in the settlement, passing on in 1743.

Worshipped On Planks

To the south of the old Presbyterian Yard as this cemetery is sometimes called, a meeting house was erected in 1740 by Samuel Waldo, owner of the Waldo patent. The structure was 30 by 40, a plain building, with no porch or belfry. The timber for the construction was cut from the same lot of clear pine, the posts and beams planed and beaded to save the trouble of casing. The windows were glazed by three by four inch panes set in lead but not in the customary diamond shape. The pulpit was roughly made and the congregation sat for worship on rough planks. It later was sold to John Watis, who razed it and erected a house on his own lot from the lumber.

This house is the present summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wiggin of Rockland. The walls are of pine plank probably 2 1/2 or 3 inches in thickness. No windows were placed in the cellar wall for light in the cellar and none of windows could be raised until made to do so by setting in another casing. The old heavy doors remain with the old fashioned hinges. Tradition has it that Indians at one time stole the lead from the windows to make bullets.

There is also a secret chamber in the place discovered by electricians when the house was wired. The old chimney is intact, and the house has a distinct charm of its own, particularly since Mrs. Wiggin preserves the furnishings in their natural settings so far as possible. Of especial connection with the settlement of the town are two Indian baskets made in town one with cover and the other without, made apparently of strips of ash and walnut. In the attic are two sleds which some of the first settlers used for the hauling of staves and wood so many years ago before the importation of the ox-teams.

The home occupied by Charles Libby is the first Congregational parsonage and was the home of the Rev. Jonathan Huse, from 1795 to his death in 1854 as nearly as one can tell from record. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1788, came to Warren in 1794 and was ordained in 1795. He figured largely in town history, and was trustee of Warren Academy from 1808 until his death. What is called the church lot adjoins the property. The gown which Mr. Huse wore when in the pulpit here is now the property of the Congregational Church.

Some Ancient Houses

Among the oldest frame houses in town is that of Norman W. Lermond, director of the Knox Arboretum, located at Oyster River. The original shingles still remain on the southern side, worn as thin as paper. The date it was built is not definitely established, but was either 1770 or 1776. It was built of lumber saved at the Oyster River Mill, that of Alexander Lermond probably. The roofing and wall boards are two feet and over in width.

According to record the home of Mrs. Mina Russell was built about the same time, it being the home of Samuel Boggs (2) who was killed at Bigyduce in 1779.

The summer home of Chester E. A. Starrett of Providence, R. I., is old also being erected by Robert Boggs, son of William Boggs. The wooden door which shuts in the brick oven in the old big chimney measures 27 inches wide, and is of one board. Mr. Starrett says that the floor boards of the attic are equally as wide. The William Boggs property extended to the river and was valuable because of the alewife fishery.

The home of the late Gen. Ellis Spear dates back to 1810 and is near the original site of the Robert Spear house. The original cellar lies to the south of the house which is of colonial design.

The Dr. Benjamin Buxton place on Buxton hill is of interest since at one time it is said that the entertained Jefferson Davis there. At any rate Dr. Buxton who received his medical degree at Bowdoin College in 1830, and who practiced medicine in Warren for 48 years, enlisted during the Civil War as surgeon of the Fifth regiment of Maine, was taken prisoner at Bull Run but was well treated by the Southern armies. Others say that Mr. Buxton was of Southern extraction, which was a contributing reason.

The location of the present G. Dudley Gould home was the site of the Colonel James Head place. Colonel Head was responsible for the row of beautiful elms on Main Street. He lies buried in the Town Yard, and is a Revolutionary War soldier.

GEN. AND MRS. KNOX WILL RECEIVE

Knox County will celebrate the birthday of Major General Henry Knox, July 26, at beautiful Montpelier, replica of the original Montpelier, with especially impressive exercises. The mansion will be open to visitors from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. at a reduced admission fee.

Gen. Knox, as chief of Artillery in the Revolutionary War, bore the complete reliance and affection of Washington. He fought through Bunker Hill, Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine to Yorktown. In the first cabinet he served as Secretary of War. Upon his retirement Gen. Knox moved to Thomaston. Here he built a stately home "Montpelier" in which to spend his declining years. Here he died in 1806, and here he is buried. The original "Montpelier" was torn down in 1871 to make way for the Maine Central Railroad.

Through the efforts of the Gen. Knox Chapter, D.A.R., aided by generous contributions from the late Cyrus H. K. Curtis and many other patriotic citizens a replica of the famous mansion was built and furnished and dedicated as a Memorial to the famous General.

Saturday, July 25, appropriate ceremonies will be held at Gen. Knox's grave in the cemetery on Erin street, Thomaston, at 9 a. m. A company of the C.A.C. and a troop of Girl Scouts will act as escort. Members of all patriotic bodies in Knox County will attend. At 10 will come the annual meeting of the Knox Memorial Association at Montpelier, election of officers and all necessary business will be the order of the morning.

An orchestra under the direction of Mrs. Emma Harvey of Rockland will play during the afternoon. Miss Doris Heald of Camden will present a group of young people, who will dance the "Minuet" and Mrs. Edith Richards and Mrs. Grace Strout of Thomaston sponsor a group of children who will sing old time songs.

Hostesses for the day will be members of Gen. Knox and Lady Knox Chapters, D.A.R., who will wear colonial costumes. Miss Rita Smith and Miss Margaret Ruggles of Thomaston will arrange the decorations in the mansion. Alfred Strout directs the decorations out of doors.

There will be an exhibition of Home Industries in the Museum Room. Ice cream and cake will be served on the grounds.

Mrs. Max Levarron and daughter Ruth, and father-in-law, Mr. Levarron of St. John's, Michigan, are guests of Mrs. Levarron's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willis, Ash Point.

George E. Dunton was home from Bar Harbor over the weekend.

Members of the McDougall-Ladd Company, with guests, were entertained Friday night at Crescent Beach, the hostess being Mrs. Clyde Vining. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Ladd, Miss Gladys Blethen, Miss Mary Harriman, Miss Helen Sullivan, Miss Mertie Hemenway of New York, Ernest Keywood, George W. Roberts and George Brown of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. John Savage of Mt. Vernon, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Judkins and daughter Beth of Waterville, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Metcalf and daughters Jean and Jane of Farmington, George S. Wardwell of East Weymouth, Mass., and Capt. Edmund Hichborn and Levi Griffin of Stockton Springs were guests at a dinner party given Sunday by Mrs. Leila Benner, Camden street.

Mrs. Earl Gowell has returned from a visit with Mrs. Alexander Davis at Bucksport.

Mrs. Damie Gardner is in Egypt, Mass., for two weeks as the guest of Mrs. T. C. Fales. During her absence Mrs. Frederick W. Rugg of New York is substituting as soloist at the Christian Science Church.

FARM BUREAU GAINS

Knox-Lincoln District Stands Well in the Membership Race

Membership in the fourteen county farm bureaus of Maine for the year ending June 30 showed an increase of more than 10 percent over the low marks of the depression set in 1933. The 1936 membership was 11,643, a total of 5051 men and 6592 women.

Declaring that seven counties showed increases in membership ranging from 34 in York County to 112 in Penobscot County, Richard C. Dolloff, county agent leader, said that York county again leads the state in membership, with Aroostook and Penobscot in second and third place.

Following is the membership by counties: Androscoggin - Sagadahoc 848; Aroostook, 1059; Cumberland, 861; Franklin, 761; Hancock, 642; Kennebec, 1002; Knox-Lincoln, 787; Oxford, 822; Penobscot, 1045; Piscataquis, 709; Somerset, 696; Waldo, 609; Washington, 535; York, 1207.

FOR THE GARDEN PARTY

An esteemed correspondent writes: There is to be a garden party at the beautiful home of Mrs. Clara E. Head, a former resident of Rockland, at the head of Nequasset Lake, Woolwich, and I am wondering if you would like to make mention of the fact in the next issue of The Courier-Gazette, as the proceeds are for the benefit of Red Cross work. Refreshments of course, for which there will be a small charge of 25 cents.

Mrs. Head spends her summers at her home here and the winter at St. Petersburg. Right now her gardens are at their best and the date will be next Friday, the 24th of July, from 3 to 5. Markers will be placed from the No. 1 highway directing all cars to Mrs. Head's residence. Ryan's Corner will be the first turn from the highway.

The Old Court House

The building now used as the Intermediate school building was in 1799 a Court House. The first case was held there in November of that year. The Court of Common Pleas, it hitherto had been located in Waldoboro, but on appeal of a Mr. Wilde, it was moved here but was not finished until two or three years later.

The new art and science building connected with the Knox Arboretum is located over the William Walker cellar. Mr. Walker had drawn lot one, which began at Oyster River. Another cellar, of Mr. Walker's still can be located not far from the art building.

The Eaton place, owned by Clement T. Moody, looks much as it did when the Eatons were there with the exception of the gardens and the picket fence. Cyrus Eaton, beloved historian, came to Warren from Southboro, Mass., in 1804. In 1806 he married Mary Lermond, bought the lot and house which had been farmed by Gideon Seavey, a blacksmith. Here he lived for 66 years. He was preceptor at Warren Academy, and town clerk for many years.

Warren's Old Canals

The old canals built by General Henry Knox back in 1795 are still visible at the Upper Falls, and at Hart's Falls. An interesting story accompanies them. A Mr. Barrett had begun making the canals and locks a few years before that date but sold to General Henry Knox who bought the mill at the Upper Falls and the saw mill at Hart's Falls which Mr. Cobb and W. Lermond operated. Knox completed the canal at the Upper Falls, raising the dam there sufficiently to supersede the necessity of a lock at Hart's Falls. Locks around the former were built on the eastern bank of the Georges several hundred feet below the dam, leading into a thicket of willows.

At present it is probably eight feet in width and deep enough to float the ordinary rowboat for a short distance. General Knox hired a French engineer first to make the canal, and this was done with earth embankments. The Frenchman left before the project could be tried out. Consequently the hot sun dried the earth and when the water was high enough to try it out, the whole thing was washed away.

The next year a man named Life Wilson built it over with plank and timber, the same also at the Lower Falls. Rafts and gondolas loaded with lumber were a common sight in the river, with tolls charged at the locks. However since most of the boats were the general's own, he did not collect much revenue that way. These locks were used until after General Knox's death.

The Historical Pageant

While the coming bi-centennial celebration of the settlement of Warren, scheduled for Thursday and Friday of next week, contains many highlights, probably paramount among all events is the beautiful colonial historical pageant "Pictures From the Past," to be presented in the Sherbourn Kaloeh field Friday afternoon, July 31, at 3 o'clock.

The pageant contains eight episodes under each of which are several scenes of historical Warren from the year of settlement in 1736 up to the time of the last celebration, July 4, 1876, when the 100th birthday of the incorporation of Warren as a town was celebrated.

Different groups in order of settlement are to be seen. There will be the coming of the first settlers, the Scotch Irish, and later the Scotch. Gen. Waldo, owner of the Waldo Patent, will be depicted, and in his company that Indian interpreter who played such a big part in local history, Captain John Giles, one time in command of the Fort and garrison at Port St. Georges, Thomaston.

The Indian side connected with the settlement has not been omitted. There will be Indian characters galore, in full dress, with an Indian dance accompanying one of their acts that will beat in your heart for weeks after. The Scotch division will be accompanied by a troupe of five bagpipers from Lewiston. Those Scotch characters will be dressed in authentic Scotch kilts.

The Petersborough Colony of West Warren has place in the program, too, and its part will be well liked.

The Revolutionary and Civil War periods will be represented in effective and vivid scenes that will be remembered for many a day.

The music accompanying this mammoth production which carries a cast of 500 characters will consist of a 20-piece band from Rockland, and a chorus of 50 mixed voices.

The costumes are to be particularly lovely and are authentic, representing particular phases in Warren history.

The stage setting is worthy of remark in itself, the beautiful Georges in the background, while in the foreground will be the forest, to one side of which is to be the block-house and stockade. Topography of the land in this particular spot is somewhat like an amphitheatre. Aiding in the presentation will be amplifier service.

Mrs. Willis Vinal of Warren directs the pageant, Chester O. Wyllie the band, and chorus accompanying the pageant. The writer of the pageant is Miss Frances K. Spear of Warren and Portland.

Complete programs will be on sale next week, these programs containing the sequence of the pageant, the cast, the committees, the events. It will be necessary to have a program in order to enjoy to the utmost the pageant, and the programs will make excellent souvenirs.

but at 2 o'clock that day she once more got under way for Portland.

The hull, however, proved to be only temporary. Scarcely had she got outside when the gale having shifted to the northwest, began to blow as fiercely as before, and the Royal Tar at length ran in for shelter near Vinalhaven, then still known by its original name of Fox Island.

The captain's own story of the events which followed, preserved in old accounts of the tragedy, runs thus:

"The steam being down after we had been at anchor about half an hour, the boat was discovered to be on fire immediately over the boiler, under the deck. The cable was slipped instantly and the fire engine set to work; but in five minutes, the men could not stand at the pump, which was below, the smoke nearly suffocating them.

"At this awful juncture, there was a rush for the boats, there being only two. Sixteen of the passengers and crew took the largest boat and went away before the wind, which blew so hard, they were afraid to bring her to. I got possession of the jolly boat, with two men, Mr. Sherwood and Mr. Fowler, and a man belonging to the caravan jumped overboard and we picked him up.

"In about half an hour we saw a schooner coming to us, which proved to be the United States revenue cutter Veto, Capt. Dyer, who rendered us every assistance in his power. He ran the cutter close to the burning steamer, then in a sheet of flames and succeeded in taking out 40 passengers who must have perished, had not the cutter come to our aid.

"We succeeded with much difficulty in reaching Isle au Haut in Penobscot Bay, where the people treated us with great kindness. The surviving passengers got a schooner to take them to Portland; and the master and crew, a schooner for Eastport. This is but a faint description of the scene. It was most awful to see so many human beings perishing without being able to render them any assistance."

But concerning Captain Reed, who so modestly omitted his own share in the rescue of the passengers, one of them, Hinson Patten, of whose home town there seems to be no record, said at the time:

"Captain Reed took charge of the stern boat with two men and kept her off the steamboat, which was a very fortunate circumstance as it was the means of saving 40 to 50 persons, and to him all credit is due for his deliberate and manly perseverance throughout the whole calamity.

"It is impossible to describe the appalling spectacle which the whole scene presented, the boat wrapped in flames with nearly 100 souls on board without any hope of relief, rendering the air with their shrieks for help; the caravan of wild beasts on deck, ready to tear to pieces all that might escape from the flames."

One account of the burning of the Royal Tar asserts that the elephant jumped overboard, crashing down upon a raft which was being hurriedly constructed, destroying it and causing several passengers to lose their lives. Another mentions his body being seen some days later floating near Brimstone Island; while local legends relate that the great beast gained the beach only to die and was finally buried on Fox Island. The horses are said to have swam around and around the doomed vessel in their panic, becoming exhausted before starting to reach shore while the dangerous wild animals, the tiger and the lionesses, perished in the conflagration, along with the dromedaries and the gnu.

Captain Reed received due recognition for his coolness and bravery in the catastrophe and Nov. 3 of that year was presented formally with a purse of $750 in gold and subsequently made harbor master at St. John.

Long told around the firesides of the Maine coast, the story of the Royal Tar and the tragic death of so many of her passengers and crew has now disappeared from the memory of all but a few of the older seafaring population among the islands which witnessed her weird end so many years ago.

THUMBIN' HIS WAY

(For The Courier-Gazette)

I've been sittin' by the roadside here, Thumbin' for a ride. Because I had a notion. Somebody might be goin' my way. Down by the ocean.

Thank you, mister, for takin' me in. For I kinder shied. At "footin' it" all the way. Guess I'm not young as I used to be. Eighty, sir, today!

And so called 't I'd give myself. Fore I up and died. Somethin' to my spirits lift— A view of the restless sea again. For a birthday gift!

It's terrible livin' inland, sir— One feels kinder tied. Many years I roamed the sea. But how can farmer-folks understand. What's "got into" me?

No, they don't know I'm runnin' away— I'll phone and confide. Soon I'll leave this speedy craft. To tell 'em I'll breeze back fore long, sir.

They'll think I've gone daff! You say you'll take me back come Thursday? Well, now, dern my hide! I'll be waitin' here at Nate's— He's there a-settin' a-fore his door; We was old ship mates!

Thanks for pilotin' me to port; Thanks, too, for namin' me a sport! A. L. S. Arlington, Mass.

TO FRYE MOUNTAIN

Mrs. Overlock Gives Readers a Summary Of What She Saw There

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

I started out for a ride one day recently on No. 220 to Liberty then on No. 3 toward North Seaboard, then left the black road for one far less desirable—just a country road, rutty and full of bumps. After various turnings we finally came out at a place called "Ruffingham Meadow" in Montville where son plans to fish for trout when he returns to Maine in August.

I was told that this meadow was a large one and covered with a growth of alders. Through this tangle of bush and grass runs a stream in which are found the speckled beauties. Upon inquiry I found that from the road where we were, to follow the stream down through the meadow to another road was about two miles with deep holes a plenty. On climbing a rocky hill, where the car rocked and bumped, we at last came to a fairly good road which took us to Center Montville.

From there we took the best looking road and went on until we came to a sign, which read "Trail to Look-out Station." In and out, up and down and around we drove until at last came to a new telephone line which crossed the road and went up through a pasture, so we knew we must be on the right track. Still going up hill we came at last to a road recently built which when completed will take one to within a short walk to the station.

This lookout station is on the tract of land on which the United States has an option for park purposes. The watchman told me that 185 men were working at different places on the tract clearing and building roads, trails, etc. Meeting a car coming down we asked how far we could go in the car. The reply was "Until you see the sign 'Park Here'." We parked and started on foot over the trail to the station about one-quarter of a mile up, up, up until we reached the top of Frye Mountain where the station is located.

The mountain is flat and rocky on top, very similar to Cadillac, in fact is solid ledge 1150 feet high and the view from the top is wonderful. In the distance can be seen Mts. Kelly, Abraham, Saddleback, Blue and Mt. Bigelow, Camden Hills and Coon Mountain in Liberty. The fire warden was on duty and told us about measuring rainfall, velocity of wind etc. He loaned us his field glasses and proved a very courteous young man. To all I say visit Frye Mt. and gaze over the countryside in Maine. Route 137 is most direct route.

Now you can do away with the hot job of summer cooking—and never give up a meal. Incredible? It's true. Science now gives you a new miracle of electricity—"Absent Cookery."

You place your entire meal, from meat to dessert, in a cold oven—set the "Chef's Brain," and leave the house if you wish. Return just before dinner and your meal is ready. Another astonishing fact is that kitchen temperature is raised only about 1° during the cooking of an entire meal. Electric Cookery is Cool Cookery.

Come in now and learn the whole amazing truth about electric cookery. See the wonderful new Hotpoint Electric Ranges on display. Get the facts about the economy of electric cookery.

HOTPOINT CALROD

What Mazda means to light, Calrod means to cookery. Calrod is the name given to Hotpoint's hi-speed sealed-in-metal cooking coil which has revolutionized electric cookery. It brings newspeed, new cleanliness and new economy to the kitchen.

THRIFT COOKER

Economical. Uses only about as much current as the kitchen light. Cooks an entire meal of meat, vegetables, dessert—or bakes small quantities, like a few potatoes, without need for heating up the oven.
